

MEDIA ADVISORY

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Doig River First Nation Initiates Public and Stakeholder Engagement on a Land Use Planning Project with the Province of British Columbia

FORT ST. JOHN, BC, FEBRUARY 3, 2025 – Doig River First Nation (DRFN), together with the Province of British Columbia invites input into the Joint Land Use Plan being developed in northeastern BC. Representatives of DRFN and the Province of BC hosted meetings with municipalities this month as part of its ongoing public engagement effort to advance a Joint Land Use Plan (JLUP). The JLUP will guide restoration and protection of important lands, including K'ih tsaa?dze Tribal Park, while supporting responsible resource activity across northeast BC.

Doig River First Nation and the Province of British Columbia are committed to an inclusive and accessible engagement process to ensure that First Nations, tenure holders, industry partners, non-government organizations, local governments, and the public are kept informed and engaged throughout the plan's development.

The JLUP integrates DRFN's Land Use Plan, provincial priorities, and public input to ensure environmental, cultural, and economic values are reflected in project decisions. DRFN emphasizes shared interests: the Nation participates in resource development and seeks balance — not shutdowns — so the land can heal and thrive for future generations.

Significant restoration projects are already underway in the region, with K'ih tsaa?dze Tribal Park as a central focus for healing after decades of industrial impact.

Community engagement is at the heart of the JLUP. Please take the JLUP survey and share your opinion. An online survey allows anyone to provide input into the Doig River First Nation-B.C. Joint Land Use Plan. The survey will be open from Feb. 3 to March 3, 2026. The survey can be found here: JLUP survey

Input will be summarized in a What We Heard report, to be shared with stakeholders and the public in spring 2026.

Municipal meetings are free and open to all community members. Attendees will:

- Learn about DRFN and BC's Joint Land Use planning process
- Share feedback directly with DRFN and BC representatives

We invite everyone to join, connect, and learn more about the land use planning work we are undertaking with the Province of BC. A Q&A period will follow each session. Your voice matters, and we look forward to hearing from you.

Upcoming municipal meetings:

- Fort St John | February 9, 2026

Recent municipal meetings:

- District of Taylor | February 2, 2026
- Dawson Creek | January 26, 2026
- Peace River Regional District | January 29, 2026

Learn more about the DRFN Land Use Plan: DRFN Land Use Plan - Doig River First Nation

Read more about the JLUP: Joint Land Use Plan - Doig River First Nation

Take the survey: JLUP survey

CONTACT

Laureen Whyte & Ashraf Amlani

Email: engagement@doigriverfn.com

Phone: 250.794.9727

ABOUT DOIG RIVER FIRST NATION

Doig River First Nation, traditionally known as Tsáá? čhé ne dane, are descendants of the Dane-zaa peoples who have occupied the upper Peace River region of British Columbia and Alberta for thousands of years. Doig River First Nation's traditional base extends in all directions from Gat Tah Kwâ, now called the city of Fort St. John, and includes more than 330 members living on and off reserve. Doig River First Nation is part of Treaty 8 and is committed to building a community where everyone feels cared for and supported in their journey towards health and well-being, where traditional wisdom and knowledge is combined with modern technology and where everyone has the resources they need to live a good life.